CHAPTER XVI.

DOWN the Father of Waters a month or so after their flight into the blue grass country, the company of players to New Orleans.

Drawing up in due course to the levee, they became a part of the general bustle and confusion; hurriedly disengaged, rushed about for their luggage, because even one else was running; hastily entered carriages, of which there was a limited supply, and were whisked off over the rough cobblestones which constituted the principal pavements of the city.

The hotel was finally reached, and what a unique hostelry it was. "Set the St. Charles down in St. Petersburg," commented a chronicler in 1840, "and you would think it a palace; in Boston, and ten to one you would christen it a college; in London, and it would remind you of an exchange." It represented at that day the evolution of the American traveler, the primitive inn, instituted for passengers and way-faring men; the development of the pothouse to the metropolitan hotel, of the rural ale room to the palatial salon.

"What a change from country hostilities!" exclaimed the manager after the company were installed in commodious rooms.

Beneath the porch and reception hall extended the large barroom, where several sets of men were enjoying their liquors and lunches, and the hum of conversation, the clinking of glasses and the noise made by the skillful hands of drinks were almost music to the manager when shortly after he strode to the bar.

"Why, it's Utopia," thought Barnes. "Every one is happy."

But even as he thus mused his glance fell upon an old man seated at a table with the manager, with such deference the manager concluded he must be some one of no slight importance. This gentleman was thin, wrinkled and worn, with a face Voltairean in type, his hair scanty, his dress elegant and his satirical smile like the "dash of a dagger in the sunlight." He was inspecting the bouillon with manifest distrust, adjusting his eyeglasses and thrusting his head close to the plate. The look of suspicion deepened and finally a grudge of triumph illumined his countenance as he rapped excitedly on the table.

"Waiter, waiter, do you see that soup?" he almost shouted.

"Yes, M. le Marquis," was the humble response.

"Look at it well," thundered the old gentleman. "Do you find nothing extraordinary about it?"

Again the bouillon was examined, to the amusement of the manager.

"I am sorry, M. le Marquis, I can detect nothing unusual," politely responded the waiter when he had concluded a painstaking scrutiny with the aid of gravity and seriousness attending so momentous an investigation.

"You are blind!" exclaimed the old man. "See there, a spot of green floating in the bouillon, and there another and another! In fact, here is an 'archipelago of Greece!' This willful blindness is relieved by an ironical smile. 'Take it away!'"

The waiter hurried off with the offending dish, and the old man looked immensely satisfied over the disturbance he had created.

"Well has it been said," thought the manager, "that the destiny of a nation depends upon the disposition of its first minister! I wonder what he'll do next?"

Course after course that followed was rejected, the host keeping up a running comment:

"This sauce is not properly prepared. This salad is not well mixed. I shall

"Thank you, M. le Marquis," deferentially.

"The worst meal I've ever had! And I've been in Europe, Asia and Africa! Absolutely, abominable—kilot of a water-miscible place, raisurable—and this dyspepsia!"

Thus running on, with snatches of caustic criticism, the old gentleman shambled out, the waiter holding the door open for him and bowing obsequiously.

"An amiable individual!" observed Barnes to the waiter. "Is he stopping at the hotel?"

"No, monsieur. He has an elegant house near by. The last time he was here he complimented the cook and praised the sauce. He is a little—what you call it?—whimsical."

"Yes, slightly inclined that way. But is he here alone?"

"He is, monsieur. He leaves great sums in the gambling rooms. He keeps a box at the theater for the season. He is the marquis—a prince—a great lord."

"Then, if he calls you 'dick' and 'blockhead'?"

"Oh, monsieur," displaying a silver dollar with an expressive shrug of the shoulders, "this is the—what you call it?—balm."

Still gleaning to himself, the marquis reached the main corridor, where the scene was almost as animated as in the bar and where the principal topic of conversation seemed to be horses.

Sitting moodily in a corner with legs crossed and hat upon his knee, was a young man whose name was almost music to the manager when shortly after he strode to the bar.

"Why, it's Utopia," thought Barnes. "Every one is happy."

But even as he thus mused his glance fell upon an old man seated at a table with the manager, with such deference the manager concluded he must be some one of no slight importance. smoking monster, with an enormous chimney, fed with cord wood, he was borne over the land, and another puff of mael of different construction carried him over the water. Reaching the Crescent City some time before the strikers, his progress expedited by a locomotive that ran full twenty miles an hour, the land baron found among the latest floating population, comprised of all sorts and conditions, the Marquis de Liane. The blood of the patois flowed sluggishly through the land baron's veins, but his French extraction danced in every fiber of his being. After learning the more important and not altogether discreditable circumstances about the land baron's ancestors—for if every gentleman were whipped for goodness how many striped backs would there be—the marquis, who declined intimacy with Tom, Dick and Harry and their honest butchers, bakers and candlestick makers of forefathers, permitted an acquaintance that accorded with his views governing social intercourse.

"This is a genuine pleasure, M. le Marquis," observed the land baron, who, when the two found themselves seated in a card room with brandy and soda before them. "To meet a nobleman of the old school is indeed welcome in this city."

New Orleans harbors the refugees of the world, for, strive as we will, outsiders are creeping in and corrupting our best circles."

Muttering something about "bourgeoisie-epilepsy," the nobleman partook of the liquid consolation before him, which seemed to brighten his spirits.

"If my doctor could see me now! Boils! Quacks!"

"It's a good joke on them," said Mauville ironically.

"Isn't it? They forbid me touching stimulants. Said they would be fatal! Impostors! Frauds! They haven't killed me yet."

"I have been north to look after certain properties left me by a distant relative, peace to his ashes!" observed Mauville.

"My dear sir, I congratulate you!" exclaimed the nobleman enthusiastically.

"Thanks! But I came north joining the ranks of the well born angels. But for an accident I should now be a cherub of quality."

"And now, monsieur, did you escape such a felicitous fate?"

The land baron's face clouded. "Through a stranger, a Frenchman, an adventurer, I take it. He called himself Saint-Prosper."

"Saint-Prosper? Is he?"

"The marquis gazed at Mauville with amazement and incredulity.

"This Saint-Prosper you met was a soldier—Ernest Saint-Prosper."

"Yes, he was a soldier. Served in Africa, I believe. You knew him?"

"Knew him! He was my mother's cousin!" cried the old nobility. "The wonderful scenery throughout Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico and other States (revealed to me for the first time) filled me with awe and reverence for the magnificent works of God, as well as with enthusiasm and admiration for the men who, with indomitable will and tireless energy, amid countless dangers and privations, have transformed treeless plains and wastes into vast and beautiful farms, ranches and gardens. As for the mining industry, it is evident that the mountains have as yet been only barely scratched for their untold millions of treasure."

"I hope, pray and believe that this sweet and dear land of ours, this wonderful and prosperous land of liberty, will continue on its onward march, showing to all nations that the true path to progress, civilization and happiness lies along the lines of peace, virtue, work and thrift."

PROSPERITY OF THE COUNTRY.

Conclusions Reached by the Secretary of the American Bankers' Association.

From the New York Sun.

To the Editor of the Sun—Sir: According to the report of the Committee of the Currency, the banking power of the world, viz., the capital, surplus, circulation and deposits of banks, is at present as follows:

United States.....$13,310,000,000
Foreign countries.....15,088,000,000
The net increase from 1890 to 1903 was:

United States.....108 per cent.
Foreign countries.....66 per cent.

A little calculation will easily show that, should this proportionate rate of increase continue for the next ten years, the world's banking power in 1914 will approximate:

United States.....$20,415,000,000
Foreign countries.....28,312,000,000

Thus placing our country in this respect ahead of all the other nations of the world combined.

On the average there is now one bank to every 4,410 of our population, with a per capita deposit of $126.90, including about $37.50 in the savings banks.

There is food for thought in these figures. In January, 1900, returning from a voyage to Europe, in a communication to your paper I stated my conviction "that as a people we live better, with more comfort, and at the same time save more money than any other nation in the world." A recent trip through the West, Far West and Southwest has done much to confirm my views on this subject.

I can hardly state my delight in finding this great country of ours so prosperous; you may well believe that the recent liquidation in Wall Street was but a "rich man's panic," for the West is undoubtedly forging ahead in a wonderful manner. The new industries are springing up as by magic; cities are populous, fairly cleaned and well governed, and the people in general appear, to me as hearty, happy and prosperous as I have ever proved to be possible.

The wonderful scenery throughout Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico and other States (revealed to me for the first time) filled me with awe and reverence for the magnificent works of God, as well as with enthusiasm and admiration for the men who, with indomitable will and tireless energy, amid countless dangers and privations, have transformed treeless plains and wastes into vast and beautiful farms, ranches and gardens. As for the mining industry, it is evident that the mountains have as yet been only barely scratched for their untold millions of treasure."

"I hope, pray and believe that this sweet and dear land of ours, this wonderful and prosperous land of liberty, will continue on its onward march, showing to all nations that the true path to progress, civilization and happiness lies along the lines of peace, virtue, work and thrift."

The Ground Hog Not A Hog But A Woodchuck.

Tuesday, February 3, is the date accepted as ground hog day, although there is some dispute about it. A few facts along this line might not be amiss.

The ground hog is not a hog at all, but a woodchuck. He is one of the rodent or gnawing animals, native to America. He is fifteen to eighteen inches in length, color varying from blackish to grizzled above and chestnut red below; feet dark, tail blackish, sometimes with grayish rings. The form is thick and clumsy, neck hardly apparent, head broad and flat, legs short and thick, tail short and bushy, eyes small, ears short, feet large and naked below; hair rather short, whiskers long and stout. Its range is from Hudson Bay to South Carolina and westward to the neighborhood of the Rocky Mountains. It takes its name of ground hog from its greediness and its burrowing habits. It digs deep holes in the fields on the sides of hills, or under rocks in the woods, in a standing direction, at first upward to keep out of the water. In the burrow thus made, with several compartments and usually with more than one entrance, the ground hog passes the winter in a dormant state. He feeds on various plants, fruits and vegetables, using specially fond of red clover. They frequently make their incursions upon the fields at midday, posting sentinels; they are very vigilant and their sense of hearing is remarkably acute. They are very cleanly and are easily tamed. They have five or six young at a birth. They fight boldly and are more than a match for a dog of equal size. Their flesh is rank, but is sometimes eaten.

Sick Blood.

Feed pale girls on Scott's Emulsion.

We do not need to give all the reasons why Scott's Emulsion restores the strength and flesh and color of good health to those who suffer from sick blood.

The fact that it is the best preparation of Cod Liver Oil, rich in nutrition, full of healthy stimulation is a suggestion as to why it does what it does.

Scott's Emulsion presents Cod Liver Oil at its best, fullest in strength, least in taste.

Young women in their "teens" are permanently cured of the peculiar disease of the blood which shows itself in paleness, weakness and nervousness, by regular treatment with Scott's Emulsion.

It is a true blood food and is naturally adapted to the cure of the blood sickness from which so many young women suffer.

We will be glad to send a sample to any sufferer.

Be sure that this picture is the same of a label on the wrapper of every bottle of Scott's Emulsion you buy.

MORE ITEMS FROM Z.

Hardinsburg, Ky., Feb. 1.—On Monday we stopped with Mr. A. A. Richardson, Garfield's progressive merchant. He is now buying and handling tobacco in partnership with Mr. Shelby Triplett. They report that they find a ready market for burley at a high price, but the dark tobacco market is very dull and prices very low. Mr. Richardson is getting the lumber ready to build a new storehouse this spring which he intends shall be one of the best business houses in the county.

Mr. J. B. Daniel sold to Chas. Dowell forty-eight acres of land, near Garfield, consideration $5 per acre. The land in this section can not long be bought at this low price. Some places in this county the same grade of land would bring $20 per acre now.

At Ammons was found our friend, J. W. French, known to most people as Bob, snugly in his new storehouse and dwelling. He claims that he is doing a good business in the way of general merchandise, and he expects to trade some in stock the coming season, as he has rented a farm that has an abundance of pasture land.

At Balltown was found Mr. H. A. Walker selling goods to the people and taking care of Uncle Sam's mail. He seems to be doing a good business.

Farmers in this section have sold but very little tobacco as yet. Many say that they are going to prize and ship to the Louisville market. Mr. R. C. Mattingly has a fine crop of the weed and he says that no buyer has been to look at it yet. What will be done with all the tobacco stock in the hands of the farmers is a problem yet to be solved. Yet in the face of all this plant bed burning and preparations for another crop continue brisk as ever.

For Bennie Mattingly bought of Mr. Hamilton a tract of land near Balltown containing 15 acres. Consideration $100. Also Willie Tait bought seven acres off of the same tract.

At Stephensport we had the pleasure of stopping with R. A. Smith and his partner in the stock business, Mr. E. G. Burt. They entertained us until a late hour with an account of their recent trip to the Crow Indian Reservation and their travel over the trail followed by Gen. Custer and the old Seventh U. S. Cavalry, which was massacred there June 25, 1876. They say the battle-field is dotted over with little white stones and which mark the spot where each member of the doomed band fell. On the crest of the hill stands a marble shaft some twenty feet high which marks the place where Gen. Custer fell. Around this and the marks for his brother and staff officers, where they lay when found. On the side of this monument is cut the name of each man who fell in this last and most complete Indian massacre. Among the names thus carved is one from Breckenridge county, Dick Rollins, whose old mother and many of his relatives still reside among us. Mr. Smith saw and talked with Curley, the Crow scout, who was the only survivor of Custer's troops. Curley said that he advised Gen. Custer never to attack the camp of the Indians, and even fell upon his knees before the "Long-haired Chief," as Custer was called, and begged him not to go. "Twenty Indians," he says, "to one pale face," over there. But the general was obstinate, the charge was made, and the sad result every school boy and girl in America knows. Curley is now forty-six years old, being at the time of the battle only eighteen. He made his escape in the thicket off a dead Sioux Indian who had been killed by a soldier and thus clothed in the savage's attire he was enabled to retreat to the enemy's camp to the forces of Gen. Reno, who was near by. Mr. Smith secured an eagle feather from the head dress of Curley and has presented it to Irondequoit tribe. L. O. R. M. He also presented the above named tribe with a genuine pair of Indian moccasins, all of which will be highly prized by the local Red Men.

They met also White Swan, another Crow Chief, who was with Gen. Reno at the time of the battle of the Little Big Horn and who was severely wounded, which made him a cripple ever after. These Indians now lead a life of ease, and seem satisfied with their condition as pensioners off Uncle Sam.

Mrs. John Graham returned Thursday to Lewisport after attending the bedside of Mrs. Price Graham for several days.

R. L. Newsom's COLUMN.

Now, my friends, I advise you not to read the following list if you expect to hold on to your money, as the temptation will be very great to invest in some of the bargains offered.

What the use of always renting property when you can buy? I have several pieces of property which have paid for themselves three times.

I shall take pleasure in driving you around and showing you the city property.

FASHIONS BY MARIAN MARNE.

Silks crash to the fore—Pean de Crepe and Silk Krash in the lead—Brown promotes white to be a popular color.

WHITE GETS UP IN VOICE

"The fashion wheels went out more rapidly than the man," or the woman either, but fortunately for her whose gowns have been conservatively chosen, and all other effects avoided, no startlingly novel changes are imperative in her wardrobe.

Skirts, with the incoming of thinner stuffs, will naturally be more stirred and flounced, and materials soft enough to adapt themselves to such handling will be in the lead. Overlapping flounce effects are having great vogue, and multi-flouncings of silk on the drop skirts are employed to give that quintessence of elegance and "bonfancy" now so modish.

Brown will unquestionably prove one of the most prominent colors and will lose nothing of its vogue, and is a leader for both elaborate and simple dresses. A good friend to women of all ages and complexions, and everywhere seen in attire costumes, touches of color are often used to advantage.

And while our present drooping styles continue—and they seem to have taken a new lease of life—there is no known material that can possibly supersede silk. Every day brings forth from our silk looms creations more beautiful than the last, in such attractive profusion, and so as one with the mode, that no one can make a mistake choosing silk for the coming season. For the coming season—however much the models may differ.

The graceful white gown I have illustrated shows one of the most picturesque and charming possibilities for milady for the coming season.

Couched of cypher white Pean de Crepe, the soft interplay of which forms an exquisite background for black velvet threaded white lace insertion, with a white Breton sailor hat, richly trimmed with velvet bands and one sweeping black ostrich plume, it forms a toilet that would lend distinction to the most distinguished maid or young matron.

The other gown is made of that most stylish and durable fabric, Silk Krash, in rich golden brown with perfectly matched silk lace insertions running lengthwise between the plaits of the blouse, and heading the flounces on the skirt. This frock follows the modish fancy for the shirt-waist suit, which is establishing itself with much the same firm hold as has the shirtwaist.

Blouses drop a trifle less in front, and belted are worn quite so low, although the moderately straight front models in corsets such as the C-B-A and the Spirit show no signs of diminishing in general favor.

All Stuffed Up

That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.

No wonder catarrh causes headache, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, pollutes the breath, deranges the stomach and affects the appetite.

To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic. "I was afflicted with catarrh. I took medicines of different kinds, giving me a fair trial; but gradually grew worse until I could hardly hear, taste or breathe. I concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after taking five bottles I was cured and have not had any return of the disease since." EUGENE FORBES, Lebanon, Kan.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cures catarrh—it soothes and strengthens the mucous membrane and builds up the whole system.

ANNUAL STATE Y. M. C. A. MEET.

We have received the announcement of the forthcoming Twenty-Sixth Annual State Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association of Kentucky, to be held at Bowling Green, Feb. 18, 19, 20, and 21. The State Executive Committee has arranged a strong and attractive program. Among those who will present vital topics are Judge Selden P. Spencer, St. Louis, Messrs. Edward W. Frost, Milwaukee, F. S. Goodman, H. O. Williams, Robert Walden, W. D. Weatherford, New York City, S. D. Gordon, Cleveland, Ohio, Geo. S. Budd, State Secretary, Ohio, W. E. Day, Dayton, Ohio, S. W. McGill, State Secretary, Tennessee, Prof. J. C. Acheson, Louisville, President B. A. Jenkins, Kentucky University, Lexington, and others prominent in religious, educational and commercial circles in the State. The singing will be an inspiring feature of the Convention, and will be led by the Convention Association choir of sixteen voices.

The Convention will carefully consider under skilled leadership the all-around work of the Association, religious, social, educational and physical. Boys' work will have a prominent place on the program. There will also be special consideration of the 250,000 young men in the State in small towns and country districts and the promotion of the Association work among them. Conferences of delegates from the city, student, railroad and county work departments will be held. A new and interesting feature of the Convention will be an exhibit which the State Committee has arranged showing the work that has been done in the Kentucky Associations during the past year. On the day following the Convention, Washington's birthday, there will be a big excursion of delegates and friends to Mammoth Cave.

Last year 551 delegates attended the State Convention at Lexington, which was the largest Association Convention, State or International, ever held in the South. Large delegations from the 45 Associations of the State are expected this year at Bowling Green. In addition, men members of evangelical churches in communities where there are no Associations, and interested in Christian work, are invited to participate in the Convention as corresponding members. A limited delegation from such communities will be entertained by the citizens of Bowling Green, covering application for credential, giving name and address of pastor or clerk of church, is sent to the State Secretary by Feb. 10.

The various railroads in the State have granted a rate of one fare for the round trip to delegates and visitors attending the Convention. Programs of the Convention, information about credentials, etc., may be had at local Associations, or by addressing Henry E. Roseberry, State Secretary, Fourth & Broadway, Louisville.

PITH AND POINT.

In order to be popular forget to say a good deal.

Wisdom is always conceded to a rich man until he loses his riches.

Do not emphasize your own virtues by enlarging on the failings of others.

A safe way to judge a man is to ascertain just what friends he doesn't make.

A genius is a man who refuses to be free in the impossibilities of other people.

The claims to wisdom of owls and a multitude of men rest upon their looks, and nothing more.

To get rid of a bore ask him to repeat his longest and favorite story twice. Even he cannot stand that.

Only a smart man can conceal from a woman the fact that he isn't as smart as she would wish her to think he is.

One of the curious things about a man who wants to borrow money from you today is his eager determination to repay it tomorrow.

There are nine stages in the existence of the average man when he is of particular interest to his community—viz, at his birth, marriage and funeral.—Success.

Not His Fault.

A doctor was summoned to attend the miller's little boy. He wrote out a prescription, which was promptly made up and administered in due form. The next day he called again to see his patient and found the whole family in tears.

"What?" exclaimed the doctor. "He had the measles, and you never told me?"—Paris Journal.

FARMER KILLS HIS SISTER.

Afterward Beholds the Body With an Axe—Says the Lord Commanded Him to Do It.

From the New York Sun.

Dunkirk, N. Y., Jan. 24.—Frank Nichols, who lives in Van Buren, six miles west of here, was killed early this morning by a snooking at his door. He found Isaac Hall, a neighbor, standing in the snow, clad only in a shirt and trousers.

"I've killed my sister," said Hall. "You had better come over to the house."

Nichols followed the barefoot man through the snow to the Hall house on the Morian farm. He took one look into the woodshed and fled to the telegraph station, where he summoned Chief of Police West and Coroner Brook from Dunkirk. They reached the Hall house at 8 o'clock and found Hall asleep. He did not resist arrest and was handcuffed. The officers found the body of Miss Hannah Hall in the woodshed, covered with carpets and bedquits. On top of the pile were a revolver, a pocket knife, a butcher knife and an axe, all blood stained.

Hall told the officers that he killed his sister at 4 o'clock, having been commanded by the Lord to kill her. He called her from the room, and as she entered the sitting room he fired at her, but missed. Then he cut her throat with the pocket knife, but made only a slight wound.

The pair fought all over the sitting room, and Hall dragged his sister into the dining room and cut her throat with the butcher knife. She probably died there, for the floor was covered with blood. The murderer then hauled the body to the woodshed, placed the head on the chopping block and beat it with an axe. At the end of his frenzy he beheaded his body and piled the carpets and bedclothing upon it.

The body was sent to the Dunkirk morgue, where an autopsy was performed this afternoon. Hall is in the Fredonia jail. He is 35 years old and his sister 30. They had lived on the Morian farm for five years. Hall was a hardworking farmer, and his sister was well liked by their neighbors. Both came from England. Hall had never shown signs of insanity.

Letter to Bedford From Here.

According to the Courier—Journal, one of the letters sent to Bedford, Ind., after the murder of Miss Shafer, was from Bedford, Ohio, and was signed by the guilty party. It was captured, hung and disposed of. It is not known what person's interest in the matter caused them to write the letter.

Women as Well as Men

Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased. Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Men as well as women are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling how to obtain it, including many of the thousands of testimonials letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Barges in Grasp of Ice.
Last week the Ohio was full of floating ice and no mail could be brought over or taken to Tolinsport. Huge ice floes caught coal barges at Louisville and other points, swept them by their moorings and on down the river. Besides the coal barges, shanty boats and other wooden constructions, surrounded by the ice, passed this point. Some attempts were made to land some of the barges, but it was impossible to venture far out into the river even in a skiff.

Coldest of the Winter.
Last Wednesday was the coldest day of the winter, the thermometer going down to two below zero. Thursday and Friday there was a rise in the temperature but the cold was more penetrating. Owing to the excessive cold during the middle of the week Patton's pond was in fine condition for skating and there were a number of skating parties.

Perfect Confidence.
Where there used to be a feeling of uneasiness and worry in the household when a child showed symptoms of croup, there is now perfect confidence. This is owing to the uniform success of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the treatment of that disease. Mrs. M. L. Balford, of Pooleville, Md., in speaking of her experience in the use of that remedy says: "I have a world of confidence in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for I have used it with perfect success. My child Garland is subject to severe attacks of croup and it always gives him prompt relief." For sale by Short & Haynes.
